Handy Uses for Common Household Items

Here are some handy uses for Toothpaste

Ahh, toothpaste. That cavity-busting, minty substance that we've trusted our pearly whites to for years. Aside from shining up your teeth, toothpaste has a variety of other uses that will have you buying extra next time you go to your local supermarket.

Zit Remover- This is a time-tested family secret for getting rid of those pesky zits. While it isn't really suitable to use as a face mask, it does make an effective overnight spot treatment. Just dab a little on those problem spots before you go to bed, and you'll wake up acne-free.

Quick-Fix for Damaged Walls- You thought it only worked in movies, didn't you? Well, the truth is that if you can find toothpaste to match the color of your wall, you can easily use it to cover up nail holes and other small imperfections. Just dab some into the hole and use an index card or something similar to swipe it flat. It's not a permanent solution but it will help to hide wall imperfections during open house parties, dorm inspections, and other such events. For non toothpaste-colored walls, you can use it to fill in holes or dents and then cover it up with paint.

Bug Bite Relief- Are you or your children suffering from an annoying, itchy bug bite but don't have any anti-itch lotion around? Well, the minty coolness of some toothpaste is perfect for stopping the itch. It also has a slight drying effect, which helps the bites to go down more quickly.
