Can hardly wait!

I'm putting 2016 Batik mystery quilt together right now. It's gorgeous! Thank you for all your planning and organization for successful mystery quilts. They're so much fun to do!!

I found you during Fab Shop Hop. It was my very first quilt. I love it so much!

What fun the last one was. Thanks!

I loved everything about it loved being able to pick my color way. Although it did not match my expectations... it exceeded it! The finished product was absolutely beautiful. The instructions were easy to follow along with.

I thoroughly enjoyed the Mystery Quilt--never made a quilt before as Grandmothers had me well supplied--I decided to give it try--my quilt is being quilted as we speak and it is gorgeous! I'm so happy!

Loved the different color ways. The instructions and cutting diagrams exceeded every other mystery I have done before. I will be doing more of these with Fabric Essentials. Keep up the great work.

I am super happy with the result. I have done about 40 mystery quilts over many years and this is certainly one of my favorites. I liked the color options and felt like I had some say without losing the mystery element. It was also fun using a ruler I had never used before. I'm excited for the next one!

I loved the ability to pick my own colorways. I was very happy with the quilt. I love doing the Mystery Quilt from Fabric Essentials. It has exceeded my expectations every time.

I'll keep an eye out for the details. Really wish I had done last year's. Lol

Cynthia R

I made the Londonderry color way and was so thrilled with the fabric. Can't wait to see the next choices. Thank you for this quilt adventure

I enjoy YOURS. And for many of the same reasons I like your shop.

It's organized. And tested. I know you didn't just dive into cutting and shipping without actually cutting and sewing something first. That's important any time, but especially with most of us being out of your neighborhood.

I trust your eye for putting the fabrics together. Doing a mystery is an opportunity to stop overthinking, but stepping outside my comfort zone doesn't mean I don't care what the finished product looks like. Last night, I was working on my final border during a sewing evening at the quilt store and got a ton of compliments on the fabrics and the top as a whole. Cynthia S was there with her Gemstone batiks and people were amazed that it was the same quilt because the look is so different. We answered a lot of questions. 😊;)

This was fun. Just like the last one. I enjoyed seeing people's posts - excitement when they got their packages, satisfaction with each step completed, and questions about the process. Some of those really saved me some rework.

I had done two mystery quilts previously - both at shops local to me - that remain unfinished. The first one had vague piecing instructions and no one at the shop had sewn it. So we guessed and discovered at the end that we had guessed wrong. The second one should have had more guidance for choosing our fabrics. Anyone who went high contrast, and you know that was me (team Black & White member for this project), ended up in UglyVille.
